The round foot slims towards the top, divided from the cylindrical body with a ring. There are two oval cartouches both at the front and back, showing cupids playing. The cartouches are connected with a bunch of fruits in a bay-leaf frame ending in scrolls. The scenes are surmounted by flowery garlands bay boughs decorated the bottom. The top and the foot rim are plain, jointed. On the basis of the shape and the decoration, this object can be categorized as Neo-Baroque among the different stylistic trends in nineteenth century Europe.
